FLAGS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM

The Union Flag

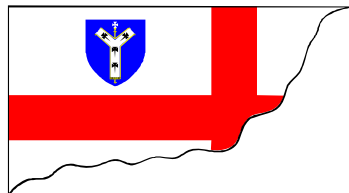

The Union Flag, commonly known as the Union Jack, should be flown with the broad white band of the St. Andrew's cross above the red band of the St. Patrick's cross in the upper hoist corner. When flown amongst other national flags the Union Flag should be flown from the largest flagpole, or if the flagpoles are the same height, from the left most pole. J.W. Plant will not supply defaced Union Flags unless there is written approval from the Government. All British Flags are normally only available in a proportion of 2:1, other sizes are available on request.

INTERNATIONAL FLAGS

Our complete list of international flags is shown opposite, but in order to simplify the pricing we have grouped them into seven categories according to the complexity of their design. It is important to note that the designs of any particular country's flag may change without warning, thereby affecting its complexity and price. J W Plant therefore reserve the right to alter the prices in accordance with the design of any national flag at the time of ordering. Customers should also note that the proportions of national flags vary from country to country. As the United Kingdom's National Flag proportions are generally recognised as 2:1 it is normal to fly other national flags in the same proportion. We have therefore shown the prices for these sizes. However, flags are readily available in other dimensions, particularly where the correct proportions are required.

The prices for these dimensions are available on request.

Flags incorporating the Union Flag can only be supplied in the proportions of 2:1 (e.g. Ensigns and Defaced Ensigns).

FLAG SIZES

The size of a flag is measured by its length or fly, and this is governed in yards. The shorter breadth is known as its hoist. Approximate size is determined by the height at which the flag is flown. The simple rule to determine this is 1 yard for every 10' of flagstaff. Therefore, a 25', free standing, flagpole would require a 2½ yard flag and 40' flagpole would require a 4 yard flag.

Different considerations apply when the flag is flying from a flagstaff on the top of a building. Here size is based on the overall proportions of the flag. In order to ensure that the flag appears aesthetically correct when flying, one should generally adopt a scale of 1 sq. ft. of flag per 1 linear foot of height.

Please remember, this is a general rule and may not apply in all situations.

If you have any doubt over the size of your requirement J.W. Plant & Co. Ltd would be happy to give any advice.

FLAG CARE

Just how long a flag lasts is an impossible question to answer, but you can help to extend your flag's life by following a few simple rules.

DO NOT fly a flag at night: Apart from being improper practice, it unnecessarily reduces the lifespan of the flag.

ALWAYS allow a flag to dry before folding: This prevents mildew.

ALWAYS bring a flag down in severe weather.

WASH your flag: On a regular basis, every two weeks or, in heavily polluted areas, every week.

Washing Instructions: Woven polyester flags require a warm wash of 40 degrees C and knitted polyester a hot wash of 50 degrees C. Use any proprietary brand of washing powder.
This point can not be emphasised too strongly, dirt and acids that are carried in the atmosphere destroy the material. If these are not washed off degradation will rapidly take place and the lifespan of your flag will be dramatically reduced.

If flags are left too long before cleaning the task becomes almost impossible.

REPAIR: Flags should be returned to the manufacturer for repair at the first sign of wear
